Confidence in the Age of Competition - Raising Leaders

The world today is interconnected. An individual is no longer limited by physical boundaries, but is a part of a bigger whole that is diverse, challenging and competitive. Hence, progress is not defined by individual prowess but by how one measures up to overcoming challenges to rise to progress.

With the virtual world being a reality, standing up to fierce competition can cast a shadow of doubt on one's abilities. How does a student equip oneself to face this? Yes, students need to nurture resilience, a never give up attitude, have faith in oneself and devise strategies and learning tools to fuel an elevated path to learning and progress.

A healthy competitive environment is not about leaving others behind but taking one's peers along on the journey to growth. Confidence, coming from a place of mutual respect for one's peers, gives the student the strength to put their successes as well as failures into perspective and use them as stepping stones to a better future. Acceptance and mutual respect are key to collaboration. Collaboration and cooperation throw up peer leaders who create the safety net of self-belief and self-confidence to cajole those who are able but in doubt thus creating excellence on the highway of education.

The role of an educational institution is to pave way and nurture a student friendly environment. School of International Education, DPS Faridabad fulfils this role by creating self-aware, confident, and emotionally resilient innovators and leaders par excellence in this dynamic world of today.
